Aris Christofellis, a male soprano or 'Sopraniste', sings a host of aria and recitals written by various composers for the now long-lost Castrati of a magical and bygone era. Aris, possessing an incredible technique which allows him to encompass several octaves in his singing, whilst exercising delicious ornamentation, takes one into an unusual state of being as one experiences beautifully-sung pieces by a man who sings androgynously - with the high range of a woman and then down into the baritone territories.

Probably one of the most affecting experiences in music one can have, besides hearing the equally mesmerising and transporting voice of Randall Wong, another Sopraniste with virtuosic ability.... Get it!!!!!!! (If you love the unconventional/extraordinary) ---Justin, amazon.com
