

Wilhelm Friedemann Bach – Sinfonias

Sinfonia in D major (used as prelude to cantata 'Dies ist der Tag'), F. 64 1. Sinfonia in D major F. 64 (BR C8): 1. Allegro e maestoso 2. Sinfonia in D major F. 64 (BR C8): 2. Andante 3. Sinfonia in D major F. 64 (BR C8): 3. Vivace 4. Sinfonia in D minor ('Adagio and Fugue'), F. 65 (BR C7)

Overture (Suite) for strings & continuo in G minor 'No. 5' (doubtful), BWV 1070

5. 1. Ouverture. Larghetto 6. 2. Torneo

play

7. 3. Aria. Adagio 8. 4. Menuetto alternativo - Trio 9. 5. Capriccio

Harpsichord Concerto in D major, F. 41

10. 1. Allegro Listen 11. 2. Andante Listen 12. 3. Vivace Listen

Sinfonia for strings in F major ('Dissonant'), F. 67

13. 1. Vivace Listen 14. 2. Andante Listen 15. 3. Allegro Listen 16. 4. Menuetto 1 & 2

play

Charlotte Nediger – harpsichord Tafelmusik (on period instruments) Jeanne Lamon – director

W.F. was Bach's oldest son, and musical history hasn't been kind to him for a number of reasons. Apparently he had a drinking problem or some other behavioral difficulty, since he seemed to have trouble keeping a job. When his father died, he received a third of his music manuscripts and proceeded to sell or pawn them, which is why so many of Bach's cantatas and other works are lost. As a composer his music obviously shows something of his father's influence, and possibly that of alcohol--and many great musicians have been alcoholics. Well, his music is certainly interesting, and these are fine performances. Give them a whirl. ---David Hurwitz, Editorial Reviews

Wilhelm Friedemann Bach – Sinfonias

Written by bluesever

Monday, 16 January 2012 19:27 - Last Updated Saturday, 17 August 2013 20:34

This disc goes a long way to support the idea that Wilhelm Friedemann, despite his personal problems, was the most talented composer of Bach's sons. Indeed, the Suite in G minor included here was long considered to be the work of Sebastian. All of the music performed here has a vitality and craftsmanship that is very appealing. The opening Sinfonia in D has a sound very reminiscent of the Dresden school, and is optimistic and slightly quirky. The highlight for me is the Sinfonia in D minor for two flutes, strings and continuo. It starts with a very slow langorous adagio which employs striking dissonances between the flutes and moves into a fugue of tremendous contrapuntal rigor. Here is where the musical genius of Wilhelm is most evident as this fugue shows him to be a very good pupil of his father, except that it is made all the more interesting by some shocking harmonic side-steps. The music of Wilhelm Friedemann has never been very well recorded, and this appears to be one of the best programs available. Tafelmusik play flawlessly with great passion and verve. --- scott (Calgary, Canada)

download: uploaded anonfiles mega 4shared mixturecloud yandex mediafire ziddu

back