‘Despite the comings and goings of our many American visitors in 1964, one of the most refreshing things to hit the British jazz scene last year was the visit of these four young Poles. This album... is a striking illustration of the high standard of European jazz. ‘ ---("Melody Maker", London, Jan. 9th 1965)

‘...As an orthodox modern jazz group, they possess all the qualities one would look for in their American counterpart... As a group, the four men are obviously well accustomed to each other's playing.. In addition their music has a strange attractive flavour which one can only put down to their contact with Polish folk music...’. ---("The Times", London, 18.3.1966)
