

Ben Webster Meets Bill Coleman (1967)

Written by bluesever
Thursday, 20 June 2019 14:59 -

Ben Webster Meets Bill Coleman (1967)

1 Pound Cake 5:00 2 Moonglow 5:08 3 Satin Doll 4:53 4 For Max 6:24 5 But Not For Me (take 3) 6 But Not For Me (take 4) 4:01 7 For All We Know 5:30 8 Sunday 4:45 9 Bill Coleman 6:16 Bass – Ron Rae Drums – Lennie Hastings Guitar – Jim Douglas Piano – Fred Hunt Tenor Saxophone – Ben Webster Trumpet, Flugelhorn, Vocals – Bill Coleman

The U.S. jazz scene of the late '60s was dominated by such disparate artists as Miles Davis, John Coltrane, Ornette Coleman, Bill Evans, Stan Getz, Dave Brubeck, and others. The swing players from the '30s and '40s were out of vogue in America, but in Europe audiences still flocked to see them; hence this recording session features a British rhythm section backing tenor legend Ben Webster and trumpeter and singer Bill Coleman.

While this music has no surprises, it's delightful in its relaxed swing and joyous delivery. Webster and Coleman play well off each other and the band supports the two horn men with real panache. In particular, the Django Reinhardt-esque guitar playing of Jim Douglas adds a European flair to the proceedings. Highlights include the upbeat "But Not For Me" and the delicate ballad, "For All We Know." ---allmusic.com download (mp3 @320 kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto gett bayfiles

Ben Webster Meets Bill Coleman (1967)

Written by bluesever

Thursday, 20 June 2019 14:59 -

back