

Dave Brubeck - Time In (1966)

Written by bluesever

Friday, 16 October 2009 13:26 - Last Updated Monday, 01 September 2014 19:36

---

Dave Brubeck - Time In (1966)

01 - Lost Waltz 02 - Softly, William, Softly 03 - Time in 04 - 40 Days 05 - Travellin' Blues
06 - He Done Her Wrong 07 - Lonesome 08 - Cassandra Personnel Dave Brubeck - piano Paul Desmond - alto saxophone Joe Morello - drums Gene Wright - bass

Time In, issued in 1965, was the last of pianist and composer Dave Brubeck's "Time" recordings, and one of his most musically adventurous. Gone are the moody, silky textures and glissando moves of Time Out, or Time Further Out. In fact, of all the "Time" recordings, this is the least commercial and, in places, almost hard bop-oriented among them. This set goes beyond the entire West Coast idea as well. That's not to say there are no ballads - "Softly, William, Softly" is one of the most gorgeous ballads Brubeck ever composed, with a memorable solo by Paul Desmond, who plays a slow, bluesy articulation over the pianist's augmented harmonic changes. But there's so much more. The title track has Stravinsky-esque chords that introduce a delicate theme, which disintegrates into a dissonant swing. There is also Brubeck variation on "Frankie and Johnnie," on "He Done Her Wrong." This track comes charging out of the box à la the Ramsey Lewis trio in a fit of pure one-four-five groove, with Desmond playing ostinato throughout the chorus. And here, Brubeck shows his love of tradition: Inside his solo, comprised of chords and striated intervallic figures that are just off the harmonic series, he never leaves the original behind; it is always readily evoked at any moment in the tune. The set closes with "Cassandra," a piece with sleight-of-hand rhythms and fleet soloing by the pianist and Desmond. Brubeck himself comes out of the melody with a series of 16th notes that blaze into 32nds before he comes back to the changes for Desmond. All the while, Joe Morello is triple-timing the band even in the slower passages just to keep the pulse on target as Gene Wright and Brubeck move all around the time figures to create a sense of space around Desmond's solo. Though it is seldom celebrated as such, this is one of Brubeck's finest moments on Columbia. ---Thom Jurek, Rovi download (mp3 @320 kbs): uploaded yandex 4shared divshare mediafire mega sol idfiles

Dave Brubeck - Time In (1966)

Written by bluesever

Friday, 16 October 2009 13:26 - Last Updated Monday, 01 September 2014 19:36

---

zalivalka

cloudmailru

filecloudio

oboom

back