

Atahualpa Yupanqui - Camino del Indio (1942-1944) [2010]

Written by bluelover

Wednesday, 29 July 2015 15:38 -

---

Atahualpa Yupanqui - Camino del Indio (1942-1944) [2010]

1. Camino del Indio - Canción Andina 2. Malambo - Ritmo Tradicional 3. Viento, Viento - Canción Andina 4. Una Canción en La Montaña - Baguala 5. Camino en los Valles - Canción 6. El Kachorro - Gato 7. Piedra y Camino - Zamba 8. Vidala del Silencio - Preludio Andino 9. Me Voy - Vidala 10. Huajra - Carnavalito Juleño 11. Carguita de Tola - Canción Puneña 12. La Viajerita - Zamba

Atahualpa Yupanqui (22 January 1908 - 23 May 1992) was an Argentine singer, songwriter, guitarist, and writer.

Yupanqui was born Héctor Roberto Chavero Haram in Pergamino (Buenos Aires Province), in the Argentine pampas, about 200 kilometers away from Buenos Aires. His family moved to Tucumán when he was ten. In a bow to two legendary Incan kings, he adopted the stage name Atahualpa Yupanqui, which became famous the world over.

In his early years, Yupanqui travelled extensively through the northwest of Argentina and the Altiplano studying the indigenous culture. He also became radicalized and joined the Communist Party of Argentina. In 1931, he took part in the failed uprising of the Kennedy brothers and was forced to seek refuge in Uruguay. He returned to Argentina in 1934.

In 1935, Yupanqui paid his first visit to Buenos Aires; his compositions were growing in popularity, and he was invited to perform on the radio. Shortly thereafter, he made the acquaintance of pianist Antonieta Paula Pepin Fitzpatrick, nicknamed “Nenette”, who became his lifelong companion and musical collaborator under the pseudonym “Pablo Del Cerro”.

Atahualpa Yupanqui - Camino del Indio (1942-1944) [2010]

Written by bluelover

Wednesday, 29 July 2015 15:38 -

---

Because of his Communist Party affiliation (which lasted until 1952), his work suffered from censorship during Juan Perón's presidency; he was detained and incarcerated several times. He left for Europe in 1949. Édith Piaf invited him to perform in Paris in June of that year. He subsequently toured extensively throughout Europe. ---last.fm download (mp3 @192 kbs):

uploaded yandex 4shared mega mediafire zalivalka cloudmailru oboom uplea

back