Raphael - Canciones de amor (Love songs) (2009)

01. Toco madera 02. Lo voy a dividir 03. Mintiéndome olvidarte 04. Yo sigo amándote 05. Las apariencias engañan 06. Maravilloso, corazón, maravilloso... 07. Voy a cruzar los dedos 08. Te voy a echar al olvido 09. Una locura 10. Si supieras 11. Comienzame a vivir 12. Se muere por mi la niña 13. La Tierra 14. No me puedo quejar (Non je ne regrette rien)

Spanish pop star Rafael Martos was born in May 5, 1943. At the age of nine, Raphael came in first place at a children's festival where contestants from all over Europe were competing. In 1966, Raphael represented Spain at the Eurovision festival with his song "Yo Soy Aquel" and one more time the following year with "Hablemos de Amor." By that time, the artist's popularity was reaching America, allowing him to perform at New York's Madison Square Garden. Raphael's acting career started in 1962, playing a role in the movie Te Voy a Contar Mi Vida, directed by Antonio de Amo. A starring role was played by Raphael in the 1966 movie Cuando Tú No Estas. One of Raphael's major achievements has been learning different languages to reach as many people as possible, singing and recording in English, French, Italian, and even Japanese, performing at the most important venues around the world such as New York's Carnegie Hall, Paris' Olympia, Moscow's Bolshoi, and Sydney's Opera House. In 1987, Raphael celebrated his 25th career anniversary, making history for being able to reunite 114,000 fans at Santiago Bernabeu's stadium. In 1998, the artist published his biography in a 569-page book called ¿Y Mañana Qué? ---Drago Bonacich, itunes.apple.com
