Harp Sharon Robinson - Backing Vocals Rafael Bernardo Gayol - Drums, Percussion

This is a fantastic release from one of the world's best and most renowned songwriters, and, seeing that it was manufactured in such a small quantity, it will become a coveted item in the years to come. The performance itself is wonderfully executed and Cohen is for the most part in top form vocally-emotional and in search of liberation from his own world of despair.

My only problem with this E.P. (apart from it ending too quickly!) is that the material, while excellent, was culled from a series of shows that had already been mined for what makes up "Song From The Road". Two songs, even, were featured on that album, and because of that I can't say that this release is groundbreaking or something completely new and fresh (unlike Cohen's newest studio album, "Old Ideas", which is both). I was lucky enough to procure a copy of this E.P. on Record Store Day, and I encourage any and all Leonard Cohen fans to go out and see if their local record store has a copy left! ---ultimate-guitar.com
