Toni Arden (1924 – 2012) Starting out as a band singer (most notably with Al Trace) in the early 1940s, Toni became a solo act in the late 40s and through the 50s cut over twenty singles, only one of which went gold, "Padre" (1958). However, she was well known as a reliable singer of standards and pop ballads. She appeared in a number of films and television shows including The Ed Sullivan show and the Dinah Shore Show, and living in Southern Florida, still performs regularly.

Her last album "My World is You" came out 1981 and features songs solely written by Gladys Shelley.
