On August 31st of last year, contemporary blues rock guitar hero Joe Bonamassa paid tribute to blues greats Howlin' Wolf and Muddy Waters at the Red Rocks Amphitheatre in Golden, Colorado. Billed as the "biggest show of Bonamassa's career," the Red Rocks blues extravaganza will be released on DVD, Blu-ray and CD on March 24th.

Muddy Wolf at Red Rocks features Bonamassa and his band offering their take on seven Howlin' Wolf tunes and seven Muddy Waters songs, as well as an encore devoted to Bonamassa's own compositions (with a Hendrix cover thrown in for good measure).

"The idea of Muddy Wolf came up from [producer] Kevin Shirley—starting off with Muddy Waters tunes and then doing a set of Howlin' Wolf and then a few of our own songs," Bonamassa said in a recent interview. "That just seemed like a really good idea—I really love the catalog and the band was just stellar. For me, it kind of proved the concept that 10,000 people will come out to a blues concert in America. It proved that it's not just something that's going to be put in the Smithsonian one day." --- rocksquare.com
