Pete Cornelius grew up as far away from the Delta heartland as is almost humanely possible. He's never picked cotton, never hitched a ride on a freight train, nor traded with the Devil. Not knowingly, anyway. Yet the 29-year-old Tasmanian is one of the most experienced young bluesman in the country, with more live shows and festival appearances, album releases and awards under his belt than most performers twice his age.

At 15, 'Pete Cornelius & The DeVilles' were formed, going on to perform at all the major festivals around Australia, and were invited back to most of them on numerous occasions. Releasing a number of albums including Live @ Narooma, Gotta' Live, Creatures of The Night, Suburban Hell and Live at The Lakes, they toured Australia numerous times and headed stateside in 2003. The DeVilles are still going strong to this day, with the band last touring nationally in 2012. ---janegermain.com
